TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23.

BY E. A. K. HACKETT.

NAVIGATION on the chain of lakes has been closed by the ice.

GENERAL GARFIELD left his home in Mentor last night for Washington.

GOVERNOR GRAY's first official act was to begin canvassing the vote of state.

A MAN who will even be truthful on a fish story will lie about the state of his thermometer.

GARFIELD is to be in Washington this week, and a reasonable word of advice may be given. General leave your tongue at Lawfield, or it will get you into trouble.

PRESIDENT HAYES is said to be preparing his message. An exchange remarks that when he comes to the civil service part, he will have to change pens.

WHY should the Fort Wayne post office matter be stirred up during such cold weather as this? Can't Kiel accommodate Page with one of his "solutions"?

CHRISTMAS is several weeks off, and yet some men have pretty accurately calculated that if their wives do not receive a present upon that day there will be a quarrel in the family.

AFTER all Mr. Gray can have it placed to his credit that he is a governor of Indiana. From last Saturday noon until next January, he will hold the reins of Indiana's government.

THE Evansville Courier offers a reward to anyone who will show an installment of Guth's daily drive in the Enquirer during the past six months, that do not contain some allusion to "Tom Bayard."

THE subject of Garfield's temperance, which so agitated the good people of Lakeside last summer, is now the current talk in Washington. Will the White House be run on a temperance basis, or otherwise, is the question?

THE Toledo Blade evidently has a good deal of real estate to dispose of, if any faith is to be put in its attempts to get up a boom in the real estate market. Perhaps there is a mortgage on the Andersonville swamps.

OF the democratic editorial meeting in this city last week the Evansville Courier says: "The resolutions adopted by the democratic press association of Northern Indiana, at Fort Wayne, day before yesterday, which were published in full in yesterday's Courier, have the right ring. Upon such a platform Hancock would have been chosen president without any doubt. The state of Indiana, even with Bill English to carry, would have gone democratic in October and the senseless panic caused by the introduction of the tariff cry, in the last few weeks of the campaign, would never have gained a foothold."

BOSTON is taking steps to form a public service reform association, and is proud of the fact that appointments in the postoffice of that city are only made of persons who have passed successfully an examination before a board of three examiners. Applicants file their petitions for appointment in order and when a vacancy occurs the first five are notified to appear for a written examination. This relieves the heads of departments of much personal solicitation. Here is an excellent opportunity for Fort Wayne to distinguish itself. Especially apropos is this suggestion to the present post-office question. Page and Kiel should be forced through a civil service reform crucible.

THE POLITICAL EFFECT.

The effect which the death of Governor Williams will have upon the political complexion of the state is a question at the present time being much argued. Prior to Mr. Williams' death the state senate was a tie, as will be seen by the following table, Lieut. Governor Gray having the casting vote:

Senator Veach, of Knox county, will now succeed Gray as presiding officer which will make a dead lock no doubt to continue until Lieut. Governor Hanna elect becomes presiding officer. This will prevent the organization of the senate until the new regime comes in.

GOVERNOR WILLIAMS.

The governor had impressed himself in a singular manner upon all the people in Indiana. Irrespective of party he had the esteem of all as a gentleman of integrity, great force of character and an exceedingly warm and sensitive heart. Indeed it may be said that the trait which caused the most remark of the press which was in opposition to his party, was that which inclined him naturally to be the public interests have ever suffered from this generous feature of his nature. He has been in public life for many years, occupying positions in both houses of the general assembly, in congress, and lastly as governor of this great state.

Of Governor Williams, personally, we have nothing but pleasant memories, and for him naught but kind words. With his politics we utterly disagreed, and believe that he held his high office from chance rather than merit. He was a kindly man, and one whose sense of heart and purpose was not to be questioned. He was one of those whom we all style "self-made men." Deprived of early educational and social advantages he learned to appreciate these things keenly as he grew older, and for his children and grand children he spared no exertions or cost to give to them the priceless boon of a good education. Purdue University loses in him a true and tried friend.

His death will be mourned by the people of Indiana, for the state and society have sustained a loss not easily repaired; for it is the good fortune of few men to possess characters in which are combined in so large a degree integrity and efficiency, prudence and courage, kindness and firmness—virtues which will long be remembered by the people of the state whom he has served in various official capacities for more than forty years, retaining to the last a reputation not only unimpaired but growing brighter with advancing years.

At such a time we can afford to throw aside all party feelings, and speak in simple justice of the dead. While Governor Williams lacked all those graces which adorn the high stations to which he has been called by the people, he yet possessed a sterling sense of honesty that made him a marked man in politics. He was a man without education, as far as book learning goes, but his plain, honest, hard common sense, and observation of every-day life, made him a far more than ordinary judge of men and measures.

He has given the state of Indiana a clean, honest, economical and able administration such as he promised the people when he solicited their votes, and although many of his predecessors will occupy a more distinguished place in state history, no name will deserve higher fame for those qualities that make a ruler respected and beloved by the people than that of James D. Williams.

WHAT a commentary on the destruction of war is furnished by the statement of Quartermaster General Meigs, that in the eighty national cemeteries there are buried the bodies of 147,495 men whose names are still unknown. Of the known there are 170,997; and, therefore, nearly half of these graves are men of whose identity every trace is gone.

BLUFFTON.

Groaning With Pain—A Desperate Attempt at Highway Robbery—Other News.

BLUFFTON, Nov. 21.—The office of Drs. Cummins and Crosby presented the appearance of a first-class hospital this morning. Henry Gilliland was present having his thumb dressed. He had left a portion of it with one of North Bros' wood working machines. Johnny Wiley was groaning while Dr. Cummins forced his dislocated arm into its normal position, and Richard Walters sat by waiting to have the doctors examine his hand. A felon caused his pain.

Smith Hahn, a sewing machine agent residing here gives the following account of an adventure that occurred on Thursday evening last: As he was driving through a dense woods in Chester township, at about 8 o'clock in the evening, he states some one approached him from the rear and dealt him a fearful blow on the right temple, knocking him from the wagon. He was then pounced upon by one of the parties—there were two of them—who attempted to rob him. He fought as best he could with the butt end of his whip, which he still retained in his hand. When first struck he yelled murder, which was heard by a Mr. Bennett, who ran to his assistance. On his approach the parties fled. Hahn's team started to run at the time he was hit and never stopped until they reached home, scattering machines and the broken wagon in every direction. Mr. Hahn exhibits a badly bruised head in proof of his statement. One of his horses is badly injured. He had about seventy-five dollars in money on his person, but the robbers got nothing.

J. S. Dailey is slowly recovering. Miss Phoebe Walker, who has been confined to the house with typhoid fever, is convalescing.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" drew an overflowing house on Saturday night. The patronage was well deserved.

A NOVEL COURTSHIP.

A Frenchman and an Irish Girl make Love through an Interpreter.

The Elkhart Democrat, of last week, reports the following mode of courtship as practised in that place. It says: A rather novel and hasty courtship and marriage took place in this city last Saturday evening, in which the high contracting parties were a Frenchman, in the employ of C. G. Conn, and a daughter of the Emerald Isle by the name of Maggie O'Neil. The Frenchman, whose name we were unable to learn, is a recent importation from France, and is about thirty-five or six months, but as this episode would indicate, was inordinately susceptible to the wiles of Cupid. He had been acquainted with the fair Maggie but a short time, and reports make it that he courted her but one week prior to their union, and that his gentle words and gentle cooing were conveyed to his innamorata through the medium of an interpreter, neither of the parties being able to understand one another—in other words their love lorn sentiments were carried on by proxy. But be this as it may, they made such rapid progress in the mystic ways of matrimony, that they were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock last Saturday evening. This is certainly a case of love at first sight, and the speedy manner in which the parties chiefly interested brought matters to a terminus is truly commendable, and the Democrat can but wish them a calm and pleasant journey over the matrimonial sea.

season. This will be the first ball of the organ factory employees, but it will certainly not be the last. The best of music and refreshments will be provided, and "the boys," accompanied by their wives and sweethearts will be there in full force.
The invited guests will of course not fail to accept the kind invitations by courtesy tendered to them. The ball is to be held at Arion hall, one of the finest places for dancing in the city.

THE RAILROADS.

Local, General and Personal Notes.

All of the railroads centering in Chicago are overrun with freight. All of the depots are full, and the roads are blocked.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railway, was held at the office of the company, in St. Louis, Saturday afternoon, at which various measures and propositions relating to leasing and building lines and issuing bonds already agreed upon by the directors were ratified; $50,000 out of 400,000 shares of stock were represented.

A fast run was made over the eastern portion of the Canada Southern a few days ago. A train of six cars made a run of 110 miles in 120 minutes. The 43 miles from St. Thomas to Ridgeway was run in 45 minutes; 13 miles, Ridgeway to Charing Cross, in 16 minutes; 38 miles, Charing Cross to Essex Center, in 42 minutes, and the last 16 miles in 17 minutes.
The Canada Southern road is noted for its fast time, the straightness of its line, the absence of steep grades, and the promptness with which it makes connections. The Canada Southern is the best connecting link between the Wabash and the New York Central and Erie roads for New York.

POLICE COURT.

Mayor Zollinger Presiding.

TUESDAY, NOV. 23.

Business in the court has been very light for some time past.

This morning, only one delinquent was marched up before his worship.

His name was Jacob French, and he hailed from Galien, O.

He stated to the court that he was on his way from his home to Larwell, accompanied by his cousin, when he was overcome by the spirit. When he reached Toledo he was completely paralyzed.

Railroad Policeman Kelly arrested him at the depot, as mentioned in the SENTINEL of last evening, but the worthy officer soon found that he had a white elephant on his hands.
French was too drunk to move.

With the assistance of three other men, Mr. Kelly succeeded in taking the helpless wretch to the police station, where he was accommodated for the night.

French told the mayor this morning, that his cousin had robbed him of a purse containing a large amount of money. This is probably true, as the man carried a valuable gold watch and some loose silver. If he had been made the victim of a pick-pocket the watch would not have been left on his person.

A fine of two dollars and costs was imposed. In default of payment Mr.
French was sent down for ten days.

Surprised.

Mr. C. F. Lape was born on the twenty-second day of November, 18—The exact year does not signify.
Yesterday, therefore was the 1—th anniversary of his birth-day, and, by some means or other, a great many of his friends were aware of the fact.

Last evening, Mr. Lape was agreeably surprised by the arrival at his residence, of about forty couples, comprised principally of employees of the Wabash boiler-shop and their lady friends. The guests were cordially received, and entertained in the best style of the art. During the evening, Mr. Lape was made the recipient of a fine gold ring, valued at $25, the gift of his fellow-employees. The presentation address was delivered by the immortal Peter J. Fallen in a manner that affected every member of the gay company almost to tears. Mr. Lape made a suitable response. Feeling of deep emotion prevented him from making as full a speech as he might have desired. The succeeding hours were spent in the most agreeable manner possible, dancing forming the principal feature of the entertainment.
A magnificent supper was served in fine style, and the inner man and woman were sufficiently refreshed.
And now, the next anniversary of Mr. Lape's birthday is eagerly looked forward to.

The Great Eastern at New Orleans.

The levitation of naval construction will soon plough her way to the levee of New Orleans, as an evidence that the improvement in the channel of the waters of the Mississippi, decreed by President James B. Davis, are a perfect success. The Great Eastern, smiling now with the rapid advance in its fortunes that fate seems to have reserved as a reward for the sufferings and indignities she has endured, by her financial distress, panic, pestilence and other evils. It must be remembered, however, that in the darkest of the yellow fever days the Louisiana State Lottery, by its princely munificence, kept open for citizen and stranger alike the doors of the great Charity Hospital. For further information as to the grand month-

A meeting of young men interested in forming a new military company, was held last night at the office of P.
A. Randall, and considerable progress was made. Forty of the leading young men of the city have already joined the organization, and additional applications for membership will be received by Mr. W. J. Vesey, the secretary-elect. The next meeting will be held at Mr. Randall's office next Friday evening, Nov. 26, when the committees that have been appointed will report progress.

A STREET-WALKER.

"Gives Himself Away" by a Borrowed Pocket-
Handkerchief.

And Receives a Lesson that She will not Very Soon Forget.

It is scarcely necessary to remark that a class of female citizens, known as street-walkers, exist in Fort Wayne in common with other cities. These are divided into two distinct sisterhoods—professional street-walkers and amateur street-walkers.

It was a member of the latter sisterhood who, while "doing" Calhoun street the other evening, succeeded, with the assistance of a lace-bordered handkerchief, in attracting the attention of several of our well-known "mashers," and particularly that of a young man who was rather new at the business, but was determined to learn.

In the course of half an hour's parade our hero and heroine passed each other a dozen times or more. The gay Lothario, who sported an eyeglass, cane and blue silk handkerchief, belonged to the "too handsome-for-anything's" class of bear, while the young gazelle who favored him with her smiles was a vision of loveliness.

Modest smiles and comparatively innocent handkerchief signals grew by fast degrees into ardent love-glances and violent declarations of passion by means of the linen and silk. And, after the young man had summoned up sufficient courage to address his fair enamored, and walk by her side, words of burning eloquence gave faint expression to the emotions that raged within their respective breasts.

The succeeding scene flitted by unheeded. What cared such soaring souls as these for the flight of time?
But dreams of bliss must have their awakening, and this one drew to a close at about 10 o'clock P. M., at which period the couple stopped in front of a handsome residence on West Berry street. The young man glanced up at the stately edifice in astonishment. His companion was evidently the daughter of wealthy and perhaps respectable parents. He could not ascertain the number of the house, but carefully noted its location.

He asked the fair charmer to reveal her name, and she murmured:
"Mine is Reginald Cummings," returned the lady; and after the meeting and parting of two pairs of lips the couple separated at the gate.

The young lady gained admittance by the area door, and quietly retired to her sleeping-apartment, where she made the discovery that her handkerchief was gone.

"Jerusalem for ever bright!" she exclaimed, "that fellow must of got a hold of it, and—great goodness! when I come to think of it, 'twas a handkerchief I borrowed from the old lady's drawer; and her name was on it—in full—'Amanda Barnard.'"

* * * * *

On the following day, the lady of the house where our street-walking heroine resided, received the following billet-doux:

"MY DARLING AMANDA:—The two brief hours of heavenly rapture that I enjoyed in your bewitching societ last night, has completely unfitted me for the dull routine of ordinary existence. But fortunately I have a sufficiency of this world's goods to enable me to enjoy, to the fullest extent, the better part of this mortal life. Amanda, already you have caused me one sleepless night, and solemnly I vow that my eyes shall never close again till I have beheld and communed with you once more. Tell me, I implore you, when and in what place I may gaze into those melting orbs again."

"ARTHUR MANNING."
"P. O. Box—"

"P. S.—Pardon my deceit in giving you a false name last night—(Reginald Cummings.) You thought to deceive me also, but you perceive I have already discovered your real cognomen. Can you guess by what means? When we next meet I will return the handkerchief. A. M."

With a grim, determined, bitter smile distorting her usually pleasant features, Mrs. Barnard repaired to the desk, and struck off the following:
"MY DEAR ARTHUR—Meet me here, at 9, this evening. I will be alone in the house. Faithfully, AMANDA."

The note was duly enclosed, addressed and posted.

Nine o'clock P. M. —
"Yes, Miss Barnard within?"
"Yes, sir. Walk this way, please."

The domestic with an ill-repressed smile showed Mr. Manning into the drawing room, the only occupant of which was a lady of some thirty-five summers.

Arthur started violently. "I beg your pardon," he stammered.
"I—I—there is some slight—mistake, or—"

"I think not," said the lady. "I received this note from you to-day.
Your name, I presume, is Manning, mine is Amanda Barnard, but I am usually addressed by young gentlemen as Mrs. Barnard."

"Great guns!" gasped the lady-killer, edging towards the door; "I—I—"

"Wait a moment, if you please, Mr.
Manning," said Mrs. Barnard, jerking a bell-pull. "Did you bring my handkerchief with you? I mean the one you borrowed from my chambermaid, Anna Smith."

"Your chambermaid!" cried the astonished young heart-breaker. "Oh—oh—yes—yes; very true; certainly."
And taking the bit of lace and linen from his breast-pocket, he timidly handed it to the lady of the house.

At that moment an able-bodied coachman entered the apartment, accompanied by the heroine of the previous evening, Annie Smith, the chambermaid.

"James," said Mrs. Barnard, "kick this young gentleman out of door, down the stairs and around the corner. Kick him till he is out of your reach, and then stone him as far as you can see his shadow."

James "tumbled" instantly.

For the next fifteen minutes Mr.
Arthur Manning was laboring under the impression that he had recently signed articles of agreement to play base ball with the hind limbs of nin-healthy mules, with the mules to bat all the time, and that the contract could not be canceled until his home base should give out.

"Now, Miss Annie Smith," said Mrs. Barnard, severely, addressing her wayward domestic. "If I were to treat you according to your deserts I would turn you out into the street after this infamous young man and allow you to go to ruin as fast as you might choose. But I'll take a more charitable course with you. Tomorrow morning I'll hand you over to your mother, and I'm mistaken if she doesn't teach you a lesson that you won't forget in a hurry."

Mrs. Barnard kept her promise, and on the following day Annie's mother applied to the young lady a mode of punishment that is far more invigorating than dignified. Annie was "sweet seventeen," but the style of chastisement which her mother administered unto her was one that is more generally used, and with great success upon children of more tender years.

"If the dressing had half as much effect on Annie as it had on the palms of my hands (and I think it had)," said Mrs. Smith, the next day, "all the street-walking she'll do in the next month or so won't hurt her."

The above sketch is not a creation of fancy. The incidents recorded actually took place. The names only are fictitious.

The Experience of an Editor's Wife.

Allentown Republican.

I consider it proper to put in a good word for St. Jacobs Oil, which I do from my own experience. My wife had rheumatism for years, and suffered very greatly; she used very many remedies without relief. A few months ago I bought a bottle of St.
Jacobs Oil and the success which attended its use leads me to recommend this article to all similarly affected.

The first application acted like magic,
and the occasional use of St. Jacobs Oil has prevented the return of this great trouble with its almost intolerable pain. I consider St. Jacobs Oil a great benefactor, and advise all who suffer rheumatism or other painful diseases to try this remedy, and they will see for themselves that I have not said too much in its praise.

Nine out of Ten

"Nine men out of ten neither hold nor expect an office; yet the nine allow themselves to be used by the tenth so that he may hold an office."

This is the whole secret of the persistence of non-political parties, in spite of their habitual subordination of public weal to public plunder. To break down this spoils partyism is the highest aim of the best friends of honorable party government.

To that end, the increase of independence of the individual in politics is the first and most efficient step. New
